Revaluation of Property Planned for Next Year In Township and Borough

Borough and Township officials may well be crossing their fingers and silently hoping that history doesn't repeat itself.

Revaluation of properties in both Princetons is planned for next year. The last major revaluation, in 1981, led irate citizens to form a group to protest the new figures, and resulted in months of wrangling.

From the summer into the early fall, the protesters held onto the headlines, threatening a lawsuit and later alleging that public officials had received favorable treatment from the company that did the revaluation (a charge later retracted).

On Monday night, Township Committee approved an appropriation of $400,000 to fi-

A Day in the Life of a Movie Extra Is Long and Not Very Glamorous

Though they left home whistling "You Ought to Be in Pictures," some area residents found themselves humming "You're in the Army Now" after reporting to the I.Q. extras casting center early last Wednesday morning.

A mostly male crowd of approximately 150 extras assembled at 6:30 a.m. at the Alexander Road warehouse, where their transformation began. I.Q. officials quickly shepherded their charges through paperwork, issued them new clothes, gave them speedy regulation haircuts, and loaded the whole crowd aboard waiting buses for transportation to their first assignment.

The extras were to play the audience to Albert Einstein's admission that he had lied about the origin of a scientific report on "cold fusion." According to the film's plot, Einstein fakes the report as part of a plot to make his niece Catherine, fall in love with Ed, a mechanic.

Einstein's public announcement, one of the pivotal scenes in the romantic comedy I.Q., which recently finished three months of shooting in and around Princeton, was filmed in Princeton University's Alexander Hall.

The scene brought together the three major stars in the film: Walter Matthau, as Einstein; Meg Ryan, as Catherine Boyd, Einstein's niece; and Tim Robbins, as Ed, Einstein's friend and Catherine's would-be suitor.

Dressed as 1950's university professors and newspaper reporters, the extras were taken by bus to a "holding

Township Must Decide Soon How to Upgrade Its Facilities

After numerous feasibility and cost studies, the time is rapidly approaching when Township Committee must make a decision on renovating or rebuilding the Township municipal offices and police headquarters.

The latest study by the architectural and planning firm Faridy Thorne Fraytak was outlined in an information session at Committee's meeting on Monday night. In essence, it said a) that the existing police headquarters is not worth trying to rehabilitate, and b) that it will be less expensive to build a new combined facility than to do either the moderate renovations to the Valley Road building and build a new police facility or to do a major redesign to Valley Road and build a new police facility.

The study projected costs for minor, moderate and major renovations to the Valley Road building at $3.1 million, $4.2 million and $6.2 million, respectively. The cost of a new police building with a court room was projected at $5,671,000. Projecting the cost of totally new municipal offices at $4,054,000 and adding it to the $5,671,000 cost of a new police/court building brings the total for new facilities to $9.7 million.

The total costs of the three different levels of renovation, plus the $5.6 for the police/court, come to $8.7 million, $9.8 million and $11.9 million, respectively. Thus only the minor renovation program for the Valley Road building, plus a new police facility, would be less expensive than constructing a totally new combined facility.

Minor renovations include basic repairs to the interior and exterior — things like fixing the roof, mending the cracks in the walls, replacing the windows, waterproofing the foundation, installing a sprinkler system, upgrading the electrical service and the heating, ventilating and cooling systems, enclosing stairwells so they meet fire codes and installing an elevator.

They also include moving the Zoning and Historic Preservation Departments, which are located in an airless cramped area, into the present Engineering Department and moving Engineering into the former cafeteria area under the present meeting room.

Currently unused, this area has water problems and would have to have its floor jacked up before it is renovated, Jim Faridy told Committee. Other offices would have some minor space adjustments (less for the administrator, more for the two administration secretaries), but the minor renovations would not include air area" in the rear of Nassau Presbyterian Church, where they waited, and waited, for filming to begin.

"I.Q." Extras

Bill Humes, a mathematics teacher at Princeton High School, was among the 10,000 people who auditioned for parts as extras last March. "I figured the odds were small that they would actually call," he said. But call they did, and Mr. Humes was given a '50s style haircut, a blue double-breasted suit, and a crash-course in movie making.

Lee Neuwirth, another Princeton resident, was similarly barbered and clad. "I got a nice haircut, one of the better ones I've had in my life." He wore what he described as a "lovely, blue double-breasted suit. I used to own a suit just like it. 1955 was a good year for me."

According to Mr. Humes, the extras were kept in the holding area from 8 a.m. to 11 a.m., while the set was arranged. "They saw that your every need was met," he said. "They'd come in occasionally and tell us what was going on."

At 11:00 a.m., the extras filed into Alexander Hall's Richardson Auditorium, and the shooting began. "The technology was the interesting part," said Mr. Humes. "Every take is like a rehearsal — they keep refining it."

"They shoot everything from different angles," he said. "It's amazing how many takes they have to shoot a single scene."

He said that the scene would be shot several times, and then the extras would be taken back to the holding area while the cameras were rearranged.

Once everything was in position, he said, the extras were returned to their places, and shooting resumed. "Basically, they did four shots of the same thing."

"Everyone was very polite and charming," said Mr. Humes, "and Matthau was so funny." The veteran actor kept the extras entertained during the shooting with ad-libs and humorous asides.

Mr. Neuwirth said that he had seen Einstein in person while the physicist lived in Princeton, and he found Mr. Matthau's performance very convincing.

Extras' Appearance Key

Both Mr. Humes and Mr. Neuwirth were impressed by the amount of attention paid to the appearance of the extras. Mr. Humes said that several people appeared to be charged with the task of straightening ties, correcting hairdos, and, as the day wore on, compensating for five o'clock shadows.

"It's a very complicated operation," said Mr. Neuwirth. He noticed one woman in particular: "Her main job was making sure that there were no bald pates [reflecting the lights.]" When she spotted a particularly glaring specimen, he said, she dulled the sheen with powder.

"I was not," he added, "among those adjudged shiny-pated."

Cheers to the Chief

For TV sitcom devotees, there will be one more familiar face in the Richardson Auditorium scene. Keene Curtis, who played the owner of Melville's, the restaurant above the bar in Cheers, makes an appearance in the role of president Dwight D. Eisenhower.

"If you see him from the middle distance," says Mr. Neuwirth, "he really looks like Eisenhower."

Mr. Neuwirth had no difficulty recognizing the former sitcom actor: his daughter, Bebe Neuwirth, was a Cheers regular for years, playing the role of Lilith, wife of Dr. Fraser Crane. Ms. Neuwirth is currently starring in a Broadway production of Damn Yankees.

A Long Day

Mr. Humes estimated that the extras spent a total of five hours in the holding room over the course of the day. They were given lunch at Dillon Gym in the afternoon, and pizzas were delivered in the evening.

The shooting was wrapped up at approximately 9 p.m., and the extras were all returned to the Alexander Road facility, approximately 15 hours after their day had begun.

Mr. Humes said that he was glad to have had the chance to participate but added, "once in a lifetime is enough for me."

The sale will be held from 8 to 4, in the warehouse at 693 Alexander Road, where the film's costume and art departments were housed.

Most of the items available will be articles of clothing and real or simulated 1950's knickknacks.

Township Is Faced with Ballooning Costs For Harzardous Route Busing to Schools

Hazardous Route Busing of school children — what makes a route hazardous, who decides and who pays for it, the Board of Education or the municipality?

The Township is faced with a projected cost for hazardous route busing for fiscal year 1994-1995 of approximately $93,400. The previous year the bill was $60,000, and it was one of the items cited by Township Administrator James Pascale as causing the four cent increase in the municipal tax rate.

Concerned that a cost that at one time was only $12,000 had "ballooned and mushroomed," as he described it, Mr. Pascale put the whole subject of hazardous route busing on Township Committee's work session agenda for last Monday. Because it was late in the evening when Committee got to this item, and because there was no one present from the Board of Education's transportation committee to answer questions, there was little discussion and no decision on Mr. Pascale's memo in which he suggests that it would be possible for students to walk to school along some of the routes that have been deemed "hazardous."

State law requires school districts to bus kindergarten through eighth grade students who live more than two miles from their school, and to bus high school students who live more than 2½ miles from their school.

"Courtesy Busing"

Busing students who live closer than these mileage points is at the discretion of the local school district and is commonly referred to as "courtesy busing" Mr. Pascale noted in his memo. He added that it is a policy of the Princeton Regional School District not to provide courtesy busing.

There is also provision in the law to allow municipalities to declare roadways that are less than the 2- and 2½-mile distances as "hazardous," thus requiring school busing. Criteria defining hazardous include no sidewalks, speed limit, high volume of traffic and major highways, such as Route 206.

In some districts, namely Ewing and Hopewell, the school board pays the cost of hazardous route busing. In East Windsor, the cost is shared. In West Windsor, the 2- and 2½-mile guidelines are lowered; busing is provided for grades kindergarten through three who live farther than one half mile, for grades four to eight who live farther than a mile, and for grades nine to 12 who live farther than a mile and a half.

Lawrence Township keeps the guidelines for high school and middle school students but lowers them for the elementary grades. Montgomery Township, which has Route 206 running through it, buses all its students.

Mr. Pascale's memo includes a list of 16 proposed hazardous routes, with cost estimates totalling $92,400. It states that Police Chief Anthony Gaylord and Township Engineer Robert Kiser feel that all of these roadways could be deemed hazardous.

However, Mr. Pascale thinks that it would be possible for students to walk four of the proposed roadways, all of which are to Johnson Park School. They are the route from Lovers Lane, which involves five students; from Birch and Leigh Avenue which involves 16 students; from Mountain Avenue, 19 students, and from the Battle Road area, five students.

He also points out that middle school and high school students are involved in the proposed routes from Princeton Community Village, and that it is high school students who would be using the route proposed from the Andrews/Foulet and Bouvant Drive area to Princeton High School.

Whitman: Whither Arts Center?

Gov. Christie Whitman's administration has raised some serious questions about the future of the proposed $155 million New Jersey Center for the Performing Arts in Newark.

These reservations surfaced a week after Gov. Whitman gave her approval to a $53 million entertainment center on the Camden waterfront.

State Treasurer Brian Clymer described the future of the Newark performing arts center as unclear. He said the immediate issue for the State is whether it can justify a $50 million loan to help finance the building of the center. The State has already spent $60 million on the project.

The State treasurer is seeking assurances from arts center officials that the private contributions pledged to the center will be backed up by "real dollars." He will also ask supporters of the center to present convincing proof that the center, if completed, will be able to support itself without asking the State for further funds.

Meanwhile, in Camden

The State of New Jersey has entered into a deal with Sony Music Corp. and other firms to develop a $53 million performing arts center on the Camden waterfront, near the State aquarium.

The center will be a flexible complex centered around a 25,000-seat amphitheater with 7,000 sheltered seats and a sheltered stage. The front section can be converted in winter into an enclosed, 7,000-seat theater.

The deal calls for the State to finance the construction of the complex and own it. Sony will manage the design and work, and will operate it under a lease with the State. It will pay off the bond debt.

Sony's partners are PACE Entertainment and Blockbuster Entertainment.

Tax Cut Signed

Legislation enacting a 10 percent cut in State income tax, beginning January 1, has been signed into law by Gov. Whitman. A 5 percent cut went into effect last year.

Gov. Whitman campaigned last year on a pledge to cut taxes by 30 percent over three years. She is now half way toward her goal.

Reversing a Rule

Two Republican State senators have filed legislation that would change the way insurance companies set premiums. Since 1991, if a motorist were found at fault in an accident that resulted in an insurance claim of $500 or more, a substantial surcharge was permitted to be added to the premium for the next three years.

The measure, which has the preliminary support of key Republican and Democratic legislators, would prevent auto insurers from surcharging drivers unless the paid claim totals or exceeds that driver's annual insurance bill.

The bill's co-sponsors are Sen. James Cafiero, R-Wildwood, and Sen. John Matheussen, R-Mantua.

Less State News

Reacting to State funding cuts, New Jersey Network has cut its evening news show to a half-hour. NJN also plans to lay off 15 employees.

The cutbacks are necessary, said network executives, because of a $1 million cut in their budget, which took effect July 1.

State Hikes Tuition

Tuition at State colleges and universities will rise between 3.7 percent and 10 percent this year, according to approved and proposed tuition and fee increases. Rutgers University tuition rates will rise about 6 percent, to $3,640 per year.

In her gubernatorial campaign last year, Gov. Whitman promised a 3.5 percent cap on tuitions.

College officials stated they had no choice but to raise their rates because of diminishing State aid.

PDS FOURTH GRADERS WIN NATIONAL AWARDS: Michael Fragoso, left, son of Dr. and Mrs. Michael Fragoso of Belle Mead, was a national winner among fourth graders in the Current Events League contest held in the spring. students. Mr. Pascale writes: "I have been advised hy Lee Pisauro [Assistant Superintendent of Schools] that we [the Township] are not legally required to transport, or pay for the transportation of private school students to private schools. However, these private school students would have to walk long roadways which our Police Chief and Township Engincer deem hazardous for puhlic school students to commute along."

Mr. Pascale continues, "Unfortunately the issue of hazardous route busing could easily become a political football between the municipality and the School Board. We can argue that our $18 million budget is not adequate to provide for the cost of hazardous route busing, and, that the School Board should provide courtesy busing within its $32 million budget...

"Conversely, the School Board can simply say that there is not room in its budget to provide for courtesy busing, and, that under the law, it is the municipality's obligation to determine which roadways are hazardous and pay for the transportation of students along these routes."

He advised Committee that this matter should be discussed soon so that the School Board can go out to bid for transportation services for the coming school year. It will probably be brought up again at Committee's next regular meeting on Monday, August 15.

Roadway to Route One Closed to Area Traffic

Beginning this week, only local traffic will be permitted on Quaker Bridge Road, behind Mercer Mall, and on Province Line Road, beyond Princeton Pike on the other side of the Delaware and Raritan Canal, according to Mercer County Engineer Dave Stem.

The restrictions will continue for six weeks.

The closing will permit road construction to begin in Nassau Park, a 1.6-million-square-foot office and retail complex on the northern side of Quaker Bridge Road, across from Mercer Mall.

The project calls for the reconfiguration of Quaker Bridge Road between Route 1 and Port Mercer, where Lawrence Township borders with West Windsor and Princeton Townships.

Two traffic lights are scheduled to be installed along Quaker Bridge Road, one at the entrance to Mercer Mall and the second near the Port Mercer bridge at the entrance to Nassau Park.

Phase II of the project, which is scheduled to start in the spring, will involve the realignment of Province Line Road.

Box of Jewelry Stolen From Princeton Home

Township police reported that a box of jewelry, of undetermined value, was stolen during the burglary of a Rosedale Road home last Thursday.

The culprit broke a first floor window in the rear of the house, and gained access sometime between 9:55 a.m. and 10:47 a.m. Police have no suspects.

Anatomical graffiti of a suggestive nature was discovered on the outside of restroom doors at Hilltop Park, police said. The black spray-painted figures appeared sometime between July 2 and July 4.

A car fire did extensive damage to a 1984 Peugeot parked in front of 456 Ewing Street. The fire occurred at 9 p.m. on Thursday, and was located mainly in the car's engine compartment. There were no injuries.

Last Wednesday morning, employees of the Stuart Country Day School arrived at work to find a very unwelcome surprise. At some point in the past morning or evening, a deer had run through one of the glass doors at the School's main entrance.

The animal was fatally wounded by the shattered glass, and bled to death in the front hallway of the building. The Township's small animal control officer, Mark Johnson, removed the carcass with assistance from the police.

Stuart officials estimated the cost of the ruined door at $1,000.

In Township court this week, Todd Williams of Plainsboro was fined $751 for driving while intoxicated. He was also sentenced to complete 30 hours of community service and a two-day program at the Intoxicated Drivers Resource Center.

Gregory Hunt, currently of Boulder, Colo., was fined $775 and received a conditional discharge for a drug-related offense.

Richard B. Middleton, of 51 Red Hill Road, was fined $1,250 for a fourth drunken driving offense. His license to drive was also revoked for ten years, and he will be required to complete 30 hours of community service.

Martha Z. Moseley, of 73 Mountain Avenue, was fined $71 for careless driving.

Bastille Day Celebration This Friday

The Nassau Inn, in conjunction with Perrier-Jouet Champagne and J.B. Winberie, will sponsor Princeton's annual Bastille Day celebration on Friday from 5 to 8:30 p.m. on the Palmer Square Green. Rain date is Friday, July 22, at the same time.

As in years past, the evening will include plenty of food, wine, champagne and live music. This year, Steve Kramer will perform various jazz favorites beginning at 6.

The event will get under way with a waiters' race, which is open to waiters from throughout the area and is run around Palmer Square in several heats. The winners in each heat then compete for a grand prize. Co-host Perrier-Jouet supplies runners with commemorative t-shirts and hats, as well as the champagne which the waiters must balance on their trays while running.

"Because the waiters' race has gotten bigger and bigger every year, we've had to develop more stringent rules," said Winberie Manager Tom Carren, whose staff will help organize this year's competition. "We'll ask the waiters to run the race with a tray, a split of champagne and two stemmed glasses filled with water. In the event of a tie, we'll measure water levels in the glasses."

A panel of Princeton notables will judge the race; Nassau Inn staff members will serve as race marshals.

Bastille Day fare will include a variety of summer foods from the inn, including grilled hamburgers and hot dogs. J.B. Winberie will provide food and beverages, and Perrier-Jouet will offer a number of wines and champagnes.

Anyone interested in competing in the Bastille Day race must register in advance at J.B. Winberie on Palmer Square during regular business hours. The race will be limited to the first 100 registrants. A $10 entry fee will be collected to benefit the Princeton-Colmar Sister City Association.

Fireworks will take place at 9 p.m., sponsored by the Princeton Borough Merchants and Palmer Square.

In doing so, it is accepting the recommendations of a citizen review committee, consisting of 158 volunteers who live and work in the greater Mercer area.

"The available funds for distribution to the agencies decreased by approximately 5 percent," according to Craig Lafferty, president of the United Way of Greater Mercer County. "This was due to a greater number of contributors using Donor Choice to direct their gift to specific agencies and services.

"This shift in funding required the volunteers working in the citizen review process to spend greater amounts of time analyzing the agency requests and considering the community needs. In the final analysis, the decisions made were very good for the community. Critical services needing support from United Way have been sustained and where funds had to be redirected, the volunteers made tough decisions."

In order to receive United Way funding, agencies are required to file a request for funds yearly. They must provide careful documentation and audits for the programs they want funded. To maintain its United Way support throughout the year, the program is monitored by the volunteers for effectiveness.

Panels of volunteers are formed yearly to determine where United Way monies would make the most impact in the community. The evaluation takes up to four months of careful study. A person with financial experience is placed on each panel to provide expertise. The volunteers evaluate the agencies' current and requested funding and recommend future allocations to the board of trustees.

The 1994/95 citizens' review recommendations were accepted by the United Way board of trustees to fund 116 programs through 59 agencies. These allocations do not include the $376,000 that were designated through Donors Choice to local United Way agencies.

The areas receiving funding include: child care, $619,166; counselling, $473,076; substance abuse, $124,000; youth services, $589,460; health services, $388,377; senior services, $91,366; youth, families and women at risk, $296,290; services for the disabled, $267,477; information/emergency/referral services, $267,540; community initiatives, $78,153.

Total dollars allocated equaled $3,191,905.

Creative Opportunities Are Planned for Seniors

In an effort to provide new programming to area senior citizens, the Princeton Senior Resource Center's Suzanne Patterson Center and Artworks, the Visual Art School of Princeton and Trenton, will work together to provide art classes for seniors.

A preview of the program is planned at Artworks' Princeton facility, 45 Stockton Street, a building that is shared with the Suzanne Patterson Center. An introduction to the coming program and a hands-on art demonstration will take place from 1:30 to 3 p.m. on July 21. Interested persons should call the Center at 497-7650 for details.

Earlier this year, the Princeton Senior Resource Center joined with the Suzanne Patterson Center to unify under one umbrella all senior services, programs, and activities associated with the two centers. In an effort to add new programs, Jocelyn Helm, executive director of this newly formed joint organization, and Activities Director Judith Goetzmann contacted Artworks to discuss new arts programming.

"The partnership here is a natural," said Bill Ruby, executive director of Artworks. "Artworks shares the same building, and should be acting as a resource to the Suzanne Patterson Center. We look forward to the possibilities."

The first full session will begin this fall, with an eight-week mixed media class. Class size will be limited to 15 students in this pilot effort. Both Artworks and the Suzanne Patterson Center will seek private, corporate, and foundation funds to help underwrite future classes, and hope to expand the program in the spring.

Public Viewing of Comet Collision with Jupiter

One of the most dramatic events in our solar system in recent history will occur in the week beginning this Saturday, when fragments of the comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 will impact the planet Jupiter.

Princeton University Observatory invites the public to observe Jupiter during this period through telescopes located in Peyton Hall on Ivy Lane. Viewing will be Saturday, Sunday, Tuesday and Thursday, July 21 from 9:30 to midnight, rain or shine. On evenings when the sky is not clear there will be a public lecture on the impacts or a related topic.

On Saturday and Sunday a comet fragment will impact during the observation perod, and the impact site will become visible soon after. On July 19 and 21, impacts will occur before it is dark enough to start observing, hut the impact site will be visible during the ohservation.

The impacts themselves will not be visihle, because they occur on the back side of Jupiter, nor will be comet fragments because they are too faint. And although the impacts may not produce any effects that are visihle, thc viewing will be an opportunity to observe this beautiful planet with up to four of its many moons, the different colors of its cloud belts and perhaps the famous Red Spot.

Also, it will be exciting to look for any impact effects in the hopes of seeing something, such as a reflected flash of light on one of the moons, or ripples or disturhances in the clouds on Jupiter.

Revaluation

nance the 1995 revaluation. It will be funded through the issuance of special emergency notes, with one-fifth of the cost included in each of the Township's budgets over the next five years. Borough Council was expected to discuss the revaluation process at its meeting scheduled for Tuesday night, July 12.

In early May, the Princetons were prodded to begin the revaluation process by Martin M. Guhl, Mercer County tax administrator. In a letter to Princeton Tax Assessor Carol Caskey, Mr. Guhl pointed out that all the towns in the County had begun revaluation, with the exception of Princeton Borough, Princeton Township, and Hamilton Township.

The revaluation process, which begins with approval by the governing bodies, proceeds to having the assessor prepare specifications for revaluation; appointing a Revaluation Review Board; sending out a Request for Proposal or going out to bid for revaluation; entering into a contract with the company; and meeting with the community.

The company would begin working with maps and doing background work for revaluation early in 1995. This would be followed by field work — the actual inspection of properties — and would conclude with informal hearings and a review of values late in 1995.

Goes into Effect in 1996

The new tax rates would be scheduled to go into effect for 1996.

All of the approximately 5,000 Township properties and 2,500 Borough properties will undergo revaluation. These include residential, commercial, and tax-exempt properties.

"The 1981 assessments are about 50 percent of the true value of properties," said Ms. Caskey. "If the assessment is $100,000, in very general terms it could be $200,000 in true value."

She said that, when all assessments are brought to true value, the tax rate, at minimum, would drop to half. "The 1993 tax rate of $3.96 per $100 of assessed valuation would go down to $1.98."

The revaluation process, as described by Ms. Caskey, begins with the revaluation company doing an outside measurement. This is followed by an inspection of the interior, where such items as the number of bathrooms, number of bedrooms, and general condition of the property are noted.

Ms. Caskey said the tax base in both the Township and Borough had grown, the Township by some 1,400 properties. To the Borough's tax base over the past 13 years has been added the expansion of Palmer Square, the condominiumization of the apartments at Palmer Square, the addition to the Nassau Inn, and the new construction on Hulfish Street.

Although everyone hopes for a smooth revaluation, Ms. Caskey injected a bit of realism. "In all revaluations, there is a tendency for ten percent of the people to be very vocal and very unhappy," she said. "That's what revaluation companies expect."

The furor in 1981 began in July. A week after Borough residents received their first tax bill under revaluation, about 50 Borough taxpayers called Borough Hall to complain. By the end of the month, many taxpayers were accusing the P.R.C. Jacobs firm, which did the revaluation, of being 'inaccurate and subjective."

In August, a group of Borough and Township residents formed the Princeton Tax Revolt Committee. Its target: revaluation.

By the middle of the month, 210 tax appeals had been filed in the Borough and 200 in the Township. The following month, the Tax Revolt Committee asked Borough Council to throw out the revaluation. Council refused.

The issue was pushed off page one later that month, when a number of Borough residents formed a group aimed at defeating a referendum on the November ballot on building a parking garage at Hulfish and Tulane Streets. (The referendum went down, taking with it plans for 89 units of senior housing at the site.)

In November 1981, the Borough was upheld by the Mercer County Board of Taxation on 45.4 percent of the cases that were decided by the Board. Decisions were rendered on 218 of the 236 Borough appeals.

Because of two grandmothers, many children and adults with autism in New Jersey and New York are receiving effective treatment.

Peggy Pulleyn of Oldwick, and Joan Saltzman of Sands Point, L.I., recently met at the Princeton Child Development Institute to compare notes. Each has a grandchild with autism and, for the sake of these grandchildren, each has been involved in the creation of an important program for the treatment of autism, one in Princeton, one on Long Island.

In 1970, after an extensive search for a program which would give her grandson effective treatment, Mrs. Pulleyn founded the Princeton Child Development Institute with her daughter Pam Machold of Princeton. PCDI is now one of the top research and treatment programs for autism in this country.

Several years ago, Mrs. Saltzman, in her search for an effective program for her granddaughter, visited PCDI. Inspired hy what she saw, she worked for several years to help create the Martin C. Barell School in Levittown, N.Y., which opened in 1993, and replicates the PCDI model. It is part of the Nassau Suffolk Services for the Autistic, which also offers respite care for individuals with autism

His Crew a Highlight at Henley Regatta

Decker Rolph, son of Wyman and Kathy Rolph of Province Line Road, Skillman, and a junior at St. Paul School, Concord, Mass., stroked the St. Paul School eight-oared shell that won the Princess Elizabeth Challenge Cup at the Henley Royal Regatta in England on July 3.

The St Paul School boat also won the Marlowe and Reading Regattas held shortly before Henley, the only American crew in history to win all three regattas in one year. At Marlowe, St. Paul's beat Shrewsbury, the second-ranked schoolboy crew in England, by one foot in the 500-meter sprints, and it also won the 1600-meter race. At Reading, where the course was 800 meters, St. Paul's defeated Atlantic City High School by four boat lengths in a head wind and set a new course record.

There were 45 entries this year for the Princess Elizabeth Challenge Cup, which was instituted in 1946 for public schools in the United Kingdom — equivalent to high schools here. The event was opened to entries from overseas in 1964 and like other Henley events consists of one-on-one races on a 2,112-meter course — considerably longer than the 1,500 meters that schools customarily race in this country.

Based on their remarkable record in regular season, in which they defeated the Harvard freshman heavyweights and Tabor Academy in its first outing on the Charles River and went on to win all other races and the New England Championships, the St. Paul's crew was seeded in the 32-boat draw. Thirteen boats were eliminated in preliminary heats

St. Paul's toughest challenge came in the semi-finals in which it rowed against Eton, which is nationally ranked and holds the Princess Elizabeth record for the fastest times to two named distance points on the course in 1991 and 1993. This year, in the semi-final, St. Paul's was "first out of the box" and led the entire distance. Midway, the St. Paul's boys were an astonishing 1½ lengths ahead of Eton, but they began to tire in the last 150 meters and the margin was whittled to three quarters of a length at the finish.

STUNNING VICTORY: Decker Rolph holds the Princess Elizabeth Challenge Cup from the Henley Royal Regatta. (Wyman Rolph photo)

In the final against Atlantic City High School, which may have been the first time two American schools were in final competition for the Princess Elizabeth Cup, St. Paul's won by a length and three quarters in a time of six minutes, 38 seconds.

Decker attended Princeton Day School, where he played soccer, hockey and lacrosse before going to St. Paul's as a freshman. In his freshman year, his advisor, watching him play soccer and hockey, suggested he try out for crew. He quickly moved up from 4th boat to stroking the 3rd boat and in his sophomore year he stroked the 2nd boat to an all-New England Championship.

Six of the nine members of this year's first boat will be returning to St. Paul's in the fall, including Decker and the coxswain, so the chances of a repeat New England Championship and another trip to Henley are high. Meanwhile, Decker is keeping in shape by sculling on Lake Carnegie under the auspices of Carnegie Lake Rowing Association and the tutelage of Stuyvesant Pell of Princeton.

Two Red Cross Volunteers Help Victims Cope with Disasters From New Jersey Nor'easters & Fires to California Earthquakes

For a retired couple living in suburban Lawrenceville, Helen and Ben Shimberg have had an unusual amount of first-hand experience dealing with disasters. In the past four years they have become intimately acquainted with disruptions to human lives from floods, fires, a tornado, an earthquake and a gas pipeline explosion.

That's because they are part of the American Red Cross Disaster Service Human Resource (DSHR) System, a nationwide data base of Red Cross volunteers who have had specific training in coping with emergencies, are available nn very short notice and are willing to commit lo spending three weeks in disaster relief anywhere in the country.

The Shimhergs spent three weeks at the end of last summer working at a Red Cross service center set up in a Baptist Church outside St. Louis, Mo., helping families whose homes and farms had been inundated when the rain-swollen Mississippi River flooded a wide area of the Midwest.

The previous September thcy spent three weeks in Miami assisting families whose homes and businesses had been destroyed in Hurricane Andrew.

Post-Eorthquake Help

This past January, a few days after the earthquake that killed 55 people and damaged thousands of structures in thc Los Angeles area, the Shimbergs went to California to spend three weeks in a service eenter in downtown Los Angeles. In each instance, their duties included interviewing and counseling people who had had their homes and possessions destroyed, determining their immediate needs and providing them with vouchers to purchase what thcy need most.

They worked 12 hours a day, seven days a week with a half day off — which they were often reluctant to take hecausc the lines of people needing help and advice were so long.

The Shimbergs first became involved with Red Cross disaster relief four years ago. Mr. Shimberg retired in 1988 after 36 years with Educational Testing Service as a senior research scientist, involved in occupation and professional licensing, a field in which hc continues to be active.

Both Shimbergs had been active in the community, largely through the Unitarian Church, ever since moving to Princeton in 1953. Mr. Shimberg has also been active in the American Association of Retired Persons, serving until recently as area coordinator of its Health Advocacy Service. It was at an AARP conference that he met a couple who had just returncd from working in the Carolinas following Hurricane Hugo.

Chance to Work Together

"Something about the way they spoke struck me that this hushand and wife were sharing in a very important activity together," Mr. Shimberg says. "I had had a very husy professional life and had travelled a lot. Helen had been husy with church and other activities, and we really weren't doing a lot of things together. I thought this was something we might do together.

"When I got hack homc I checked in with the Red Cross and they invited us to sign up for courses. It doesn't take much training to be a disaster relief volunteer." The first course the Shimbergs took was "Introduction to Disaster." They are also trained in mass feeding and mass care, which involves setting up and running a shelter.

"Some people are trained in damage assessment, Mr. Shimberg continues. "What we care about is assistance to families. You sit down and interview a family and try to ascertain what they need." It might be a place to stay in a motel for a night or over the weekend, as was the case for 15 families in Trenton who were burned out in a fire on Locust Street that devastated 14 row homes earlier this year.

"We give them vouchers for food and vouchers for clothing," he continues. "We meet other needs as well. They may have lost their eye glasses or their medication. We contaet a doctor and get a prescription. It's getting people baek to the point where they were before the disaster so they go back to work and resume their lives," he summarizes.

"If they find an apartment, we verify that," Mrs. Shimberg adds, "We give them a month's rent and we give them security if it is needed. We follow up with people. The Red Cross is still active in Florida after Hurricane Andrew," she says.

"You start a case history on the family, setting it up so the next worker can take over," Mr. Shimberg says. "We're authorized to do certain other things as well. In Los Angeles there was a visiting nurse who lost her uniform in the earthquake. I got permission to replace it so she could go haek to work. We also replaced a mechanic's tools."

No Tax Maney

"All we do is free," Mrs. Shimberg adds. "We don't colleet money at disasters. Everything we do is supported hy puhlic contrihution. There is no tax money involved."

The Shimbergs first experience in disaster relief came in May, 1990, only a couple of months after their initial training, when an early morning explosion in the boiler room of an apartment complex in East Windsor leveled eight apartments and damaged 20 more. Fourteen people were injured and 85 left homeless.

Many who fled the explosion had nothing but what they were wearing. One man, who had been shaving, wrapped himself in the tahle cloth he grabbed when he heard rumbling and felt the building shake. Without identification, they had no way to get their own money, Mrs. Shimberg points out.

> "We were in full charge of this gymnasium full of 350 to 400 cots. The police told us, 'You've got to do something about the dogs or there's going to be a riot.' "

Unlike the Salvation Army, the Red Cross usually doesn't aceept donations of used clothing at disasters. "We can't wait for clothing to be donated, collected and sorted," she remarks, "People need to be able to buy the essentials immediately."

The spirit of cooperation exhibited by the firefighters and other rescue personnel at that explosion prompted Mr. Shimherg to write in a letter to the editor of TOWN TOPICS, "It shouldn't take a tragedy to make us aware that we are dependent on one another, and that none of us is an island."

New Response Vehicle

In August, 1990, the Shimbergs received special training to drive a new emergeney response vehicle (ERV) to Princeton from Elkhart, Ind., where they are manufactured. An ERV is a square white truck, similar in shape to a first aid rescue vehicle. Fully equipped with lights, radio, air conditioning, heat and a window in the side through which food can be dispensed, it is primarily a mobile food vehicle, although it is also used for first aid, family service interviews and to carry supplies.

The Red Cross office on Harrison Street is host chapter for one of 52 ERVs stationed in the eastern states. The Princeton ERV's first assignment came a week later when a tornado hit Newton, and it was deployed to feed the prisoners who were helping to clean up the damage.

On October 18 of that year a tornado hit a residential area of Montgomery Township, and emergency personnel of all kinds were fed from the ERV that night and all the next day. Winds estimated at 150 to 175 miles an hour destroyed three homes and damaged 21 others, two requiring major repairs. An 11-year-old girl was alone at home watching television when the wind picked her up and threw her outside. The house was reduced to sticks.

The Shimbergs were called at 11 that night and asked to go to the emergency room at Princeton Medical Center to comfort the girl and her father as she was getting 153 stitches to close the cuts she sustained. The next day they were dispensing food from the ERV to the hundreds of volunteers who had turned out to help salvage belongings from the rubble.

They received a letter of appreciation from Montgomery Township Police Chief William A. Beachell who wrote, "Your response and expertise at the disaster scene was instrumental in helping a chaotic situation run smoothly."

Aid to Jersey Share

Their training in mass care came into play during a series of coastal storms combining high winds and rain with high tides that hit the New Jersey shore during the fall of 1991 and winter of 1992. In one storm, the water was so high that residents of the town of Highlands had to be evacuated from their homes. The rescue squad set up cots in a high school gymnasium.

The Shimbergs were put in charge of this shelter. "We had never run a shelter before," Mrs. Shimberg recalls. "We were in full charge of this gymnasium full of 350 to 400 cots. The police told us, 'You've got to do something about the dogs or there's going to be a riot.'

"People had brought their pets with them," she explains. "We had 21 dogs and an assortment of cats, birds in cages and even a ferret. A woman was trying to haul her dog, the biggest I ever saw, back from a bitch in heat." Mrs. Shimberg made peace by locating the woodworking shop, where some of the dogs could be tied to the vices on the shop tables. Other were tied to the handles of the gym lockers in the corridors.

Meanwhile, Gov. Florio, Rep. Dick Zimmer and Senator Lautenberg each decided to drop in on this shelter because it was in the community that had been hardest hit by the storm. Each arrived with an entourage of staff and media. Red Cross rules try to protect the privacy of individuals affected by a disaster, but Mr. Shimberg decided on his own, since they were in charge, that they would not prevent the officials and the press from coming into the shelter.

"We got excellent press coverage, and there was no reprimand," he says.

Pipeline Explosion

This past March, a phone call at 3 in the morning routed Mrs. Shimberg out of bed (her husband wasn't feeling well that night) in response to the gas pipeline explosion and fire that destroyed an apartment complex in Edison.

After loading up the ERV with coffee, doughnuts, pastries and supplies at an all-night supermarket, she and Don McLeod of Rocky Hill, another Red Cross volunteer, drove the ERV to Edison.

"The first 24 hours you do snack foods," she remarks. "Then you serve complete dietetically correct meals." This food is available not only to rescue personnel, but also to any other volunteers at the site and even to insurance inspectors and adjusters, she says. Mr. Shimberg joined her the following day.

Both speak appreciatively of the help that came from many sources on that occasion — from area restaurant caterers to the cab driver who showed up with a tray of coffee in individual cups, to people from the nearby Prudential Center who brought big boxes of sandwiches.

History of Volunteerism

The Shimbergs' work with the Red Cross is a logical extension of their previous volunteer endeavors. Through the Social Concerns Committee of the Unitarian Church, which Mr. Shimberg chaired, they helped establish the Princeton Study Center, a quiet place where youngsters with no real place at home to do their homework could go and get help. Mrs. Shimberg took this project on and was instrumental in obtaining reference books, recruiting adult volunteer tutors and enlisting the support of other churches.

Mr. Shimberg, meanwhile, was meeting with a group of ministers and laymen who were helping black families purchase homes in areas of the community they could well afford but where they weren't being shown houses for sale because it was an all-white neighborhood. The strategy was to identify someone in the neighborhood who was amenable to the idea of a black family moving in and then build a core of support among other families. He estimates the Princeton Housing Group helped about a dozen families in this way.

Mrs. Shimberg also set up a directory of life-care facilities and started a group on aging at the church. In 1987 Mr. Shimberg was appointed in 1987 by then Chief Justice Robert N. Wilentz to the three-person screening board of the Intensive Supervision Program (I.S.P.) conducted by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

The board screens applicants for a program which allows selected non-violent prisoners to be released from prison before their term is up and to be closely monitored for 18 months under very specific conditions, which, if not met, mean immediate return to jail.

Mr. Shimberg is very enthusiastic about the program, pointing out that it costs about $6,000 to supervise someone in the I.S.P. program as compared to $26,000 to keep a person in jail.

He also works to promote citizen involvement in various regulatory and advisory boards, and was recently appointed chairman of the board of the Citizen Advocacy Center in Washington, D.C. Formerly funded by AARP and now on its own, the Center's role is to recruit and train people to serve on policy-making boards.

Travel Lovers

Not all the Shimbergs' time is spent in volunteer activities. They enjoy traveling and have taken 15 Elderhostel trips in the United States and several abroad, including a recent three-week trip in Russia and a five-week trip to China. They have a daughter, Barbara, who lives in Hamilton Township with her husband and three daughters, and a son, David, who has two sons and lives in Charlotte, N.C.

When they are home, they are usually on call for the Red Cross. Over the July 4 weekend, they were co-leaders of the Emergency Ready Response Team, the local equivalent of the nationwide Disaster Service Human Resource System. On Saturday, they were advised there had been a fire in a home in Trenton and that a family might be in need of housing.

When they checked it out, they learned that a dog had electrocuted himself by chewing on electric wires in the basement, which caused a short circuit. The home was without power, and the family (four adults and four children) could not live there until repairs had been made.

The Shimbergs offered to put the family up at a motel, but the adults had already arranged to stay at the home of a sister in West Trenton, so there was no need for Red Cross assistance in this instance.

"This story illustrates some of the rather mundane things we do," Mr. Shimberg says. "While they lack the glamor of major floods, earthquakes or hurricanes, they nonetheless illustrate the day-to-day services the Red Cross renders."

As TOWN TOPICS went to press, the Shimbergs learned they might be called to Georgia where flooding has rendered thousands homeless.

—Barbara L. Johnson

VOLUNTEERISM REWARDED: Ben and Helen Shimberg of Lawrenceville were awarded the 1994 Winifred Latimer Norman Award for outstanding community service by the New York Metropolitan District of the Unitarian-Universalist Association. Longtime of the Unitarian Church of Princeton and active in its Social Concerns Committee, they have expanded their volunteer work to helping the Red Cross provide emergency assistance nationwide as well as locally.

Chain of Support Offered To Victims of April Fire

To the Editor of Town Topics:

Suffering loss to a fire or other disaster takes the passage of time to fully recover. But the process of recovery is quickened when people and organizations like the American Red Cross work together in helping others. Our community proved the strength of cooperative support by its outpouring of help to the individuals and families whose lives were put on hold by the devastating Locust Street, Trenton, fire in April.

Contributions made to the Red Cross New Jersey Capital Area Chapter for relief assistance to neighbors affected by the Locust Street fire exceed $19,000. Donations are helping those affected with shelter and the means to buy food, replace clothing, essential furnishings, medications, and other needed items.

Fire is the most recurring disaster in the capital region and help for this and other disasters is given free whenever there is need because of the generosity of a caring community. The American Red Cross is charged by U.S. Congress to provide disaster services but is not funded by the government and relies on public giving to provide its services.

Volunteers and staff of the chapter appreciate what the community has given in the spirit of "helping us help others" in the Locust Street disaster. The chain of support included residents, too numerous to mention here, and many groups, a partial list of which is included to demonstrate the diverse channels through which help has come:

AFT Local 4277; American Baptist Women, Memorial Baptist Church; American Rescue Works, Inc.; Architects Housing Association; the City of Trenton Department of Health and Human Services and Office of the Mayor; Core-States New Jersey National Bank; Crisis Support Fund; Department of Motor Vehicles; First Baptist Church of Pennington; First Baptist Church of Princeton; Galilee Church;

Also, Mercer County Board of Social Services; Metro Civic League, Inc.; Order of Eastern Star, Zipporah Chapter No. 11; Plumb Chiropractic Center; St. James Church of Pennington; St. Matthias Church; St. Stanislaus Church; Trenton District Episcopal Church Women; Victory Tabernacle Church of God in Christ.

This list by no means is complete or communicates the magnitude of our community's involvement in helping ease the losses of our Locust Street neighbors.

That everyone could organize so quickly and work together is the story that keeps running through our minds and inspiring us as we go on.

Director of Emergency and Community Services

Loss of Parking Leads To a Loss of Stores

To the Editor, Town Topics:

I write to say that I am absolutely opposed to reduction of parking on Nassau Street between Chambers and Bank.

Our failure to solve the parking shortage is a major factor in the loss of commercial enterprises in Princeton, thus forcing residents to the malls on U.S. 1 for even the most ordinary household needs, such as towels, sheets, etc.

Firemen Need Mental Exams, Too: They Must Be Nuts to Serve for Free

To the Editor of Town Topics:

With regard to the controversy between the Borough administration and the volunteer fire department and the requirement that all volunteers be subjected to and pass a physical examination, I must say that I find that this required examination falls far short of the standards the volunteers should be subjected to.

They should first be required to pass a mental examination. I am sure they would all fail because they must be nuts to donate their time, energy, dedication and unselfish devotion to their fellow citizens.

At a moment's notice these people risk life and limb with no compensation whatsoever ... not even the support of the many who owe so much.

Yes, Tom, your pressing for physical examinations for all volunteer firemen in Princeton may make sense, but first the mental tests. I suggest you volunteer to be first.

JOSEPH L. KING
Linden Lane

P.S. Volunteers please note my address. If I should ever be unfortunate enough to have a fire, please come to my aid. I don't care what physical condition you are in (as long as you don't have a beard, chew tobacco or drink scotch) you're welcome.

Bikers Could Easily Visit Library Relocated in PSC

To the Editor of Town Topics:

As stated in TOWN TOPICS' article on the study for an expanded public library (July 6), there will surely be a great debate about its location. From the analysis given, it seems to me that the benefits of relocating the library clearly outweigh the arguments for expanding it at its present location.

There is one statement in the article, however, to which I must take exception. It reads, "There is concern that although there will be better automobile access at the Shopping Center site, the library could lose those patrons who walk or bicycle to the Witherspoon site."

I bicycle regularly to the present library and would continue to do so if it were relocated. For me, the Shopping Center location would represent a shorter distance. But even if the distance were greater, once I am on a bicycle, it would not make that much difference.

I believe this would be true of most bicycle riders, considering the short distance between the two locations.

The Junior League of Greater Princeton has awarded the Princeton Senior Resource Center a grant of $500 to help support the Older Adults Transition Assistance (OATA) program, a counseling, information and referral program for the elderly and their adult children. The program provides help and support during the transitional stages of later years and during family crises involving elderly family members.

The League believes that underwriting programs for the elderly is a critical necessity at this time. It points out that Princeton's older population continues to expand, and services need to expand, as well. In addition, the Junior League saw the recent consolidation between the Princeton Senior Resource and Suzanne Patterson Centers as "an exciting new development that warrants support and commitment from all segments of the Princeton community."

Larissa Onyshkevych has been elected president and Ann Morgan vice president of the Princeton Research Forum. Also elected were Patricia Hoad, secretary; Stephanie Lewis, treasurer; and board members Joanna Clark, Gloria Ehrlich, Elizabeth Ettinghausen, Helen Gorenstein, Terry Grabar, Anne Groom, Eric Hockings, Mary Huber, Mary Beth Lewis, Robert Marchisotto, and Ludmilla Popova-Wightman.

The Princeton Research Forum is a community of independent scholars and other professionals in the greater Princeton area. PRF members work and publish in a variety of fields: anthropology, art, architecture, classics, education, ethnic studies, history, law, literature, philosophy, physics, psychology, sociology and women's studies.

A Theatrical Jewel, Noel Coward's "Private Lives" Staged with Care & Intelligence at Murray Theatre

Noel Coward may not rank among the monumental playwrights of British Theatre, but for witty dialogue and a comic perspective on the vicissitudes of human social interaction, he is seldom surpassed. Princeton Summer Theatre's current production of Private Lives sparkles with energy and reveals this 1930 British drawing room comedy to be as timeless as the battle of the sexes.

J. B. Jasiunas, a Princeton University senior, has rehearsed his five youthful actors thoroughly, and staged the action and sophisticated dialogue with care and intelligence.

Private Lives opens on a scene of adjoining hotel balconies where Jen Grant as Amanda and Matt Grayson as Elyot, divorced for five years and now honeymooning with new spouses, unexpectedly meet. The contrivances are clever and entertaining, as old passions revive, and they elope to Paris.

A few days later, the couple is ensconced in Amanda's elegant flat, and their fiery relationship swings back and forth between romance and hatred, while the action runs the gamut from caresses to fisticuffs.

Strong Core

Ms. Grant and Mr. Grayson, veteran performers on the local university theater scene, provide a strong core for this production. They deftly carry off the savoir faire and cynicism of the two lovers who, though certainly still young and passionate, are seasoned by experience. In the tradition of Shakespeare's dueling Beatrice and Benedick and thousands of volatile onstage and offstage romances down to several of our most popular contemporary sit-coms, the roles of Elyot and Amanda have been played by such stars as Noel Coward himself, Laurence Olivier, Tallulah Bankhead, Gertrude Lawrence, Tammy Grimes and Elizabeth Taylor in the three successful Broadway runs of Private Lives.

HORRIFIED FRENCH MAID: Louise, played by Jennifer Kaden, tries to serve coffee to Jen Grant, who plays Amanda in Noel Coward's "Private Lives," Princeton Summer Theatre's current offering.

Ms. Grant and Mr. Grayson prove themselves worthy successors to this tradition. They exchange poisonous witticisms with confidence, conviction, clarity and British accents mostly intact (Ms. Grant's more consistently than Mr. Grayson's). Whether recognizing with horror each other's presence on the "honeymoon" night or slyly swapping double entendres or wrestling in a rage on the floor of their Paris flat, they consistently sustain just the right balance of humor and intensity, of comedy and consternation.

They also prove most effective in fulfilling the musical demands of the play in two key romantic scenes, as Mr. Grayson plays the piano with skill and Ms. Grant displays a strong, melodic singing voice.

Laura Heisler as Elyot's young bride Sibyl and Danny Siegel as Amanda's new husband Victor provide generally sound support for the central duo, despite occasional lapses in credibility and accent. Their entrance to Amanda's Paris flat, in search of their lost new spouses, at the end of act two is one of the comic highlights of the evening.

Jennifer Kaden effectively fills out the cast with a walk-on role as the horrified French maid, who does not speak or understand English and certainly cannot comprehend the havoc that is being wrought in this particular residence.

Attention to Detail

The tasteful set design by the multi-talented Ms. Grant provides further persuasive evidence of the intelligence and the attention to detail in almost all aspects of this production. The simple matching balconies of the first act transform smoothly into the well-appointed apartment of the second and third acts. Furniture, paintings on the wall, an old-fashioned phonograph and the entire decor help to provide the appropriate refined upper-class background of that era between the wars — as well as a suitable battlefield for Amanda and Elyot and their astonished counterparts.

Amy Edwards' costumes, with their emphasis on elegance — evening wear, silk pajamas, colorful gowns — also enhance characterization and credibility. Lighting design by Michael Archuleta, Karen Schlesinger and, again, Ms. Grant is successfully in accord with the other well-orchestrated elements of this production.

Private Lives turns out to be a surprisingly felicitous choice for this Princeton Summer Theatre troupe, as Mr. Jasiunas accomplishes the impressive feat of serving the playwright and the seemingly far-removed world of the play, while at the same time presenting a show that entertains and speaks meaningfully to contemporary audiences. As the 21st century approaches and we obsessively stew over questions of gender equity, spouse abuse and dysfunctional marriages, this theatrical jewel from the generation of our grandparents (or great-grandparents) provides perspective, and ample opportunity to laugh — perhaps at ourselves.

Private Lives, PST's second of five offerings this summer, will run for one more weekend, with shows at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and matinees at 2 on Saturday and Sunday, all at the Murray Theater on the Princeton University campus. Call 258-4950 for reservations and further information.

"Arsenic and Old Lace" At N. Trenton Theatre

Mary Kemp and Elizabeth Stumbaugh appear as the sisters and John Anastasio plays the deluded brother. Doug Kline appears as Jonathan, Tom Orr as Mortimer and Gretchen Felix Orr as Elaine.

The show will run Friday and Saturday evenings at 8. An opening night reception will follow the performance this Saturday. The performance on Saturday, July 30, is a benefit for Deborah Hospital and tickets are $13.50, which includes a reception.

Miami String Quartet Next in Chamber Series

The Miami String Quartet will perform on Wednesday, July 20, as part of the continuing series presented by the Princeton University Summer Chamber Concerts. The concert will take place in Richardson Auditorium and will begin at 8.

In 1992 the Miami String Quartet became the first such ensemble in a decade to win first prize of the Concert Artists Guild New York Competition, and it was also awarded the competition's ITT Corporation Prize. The Miami String Quartet also won the 1991 Evian String Quartet Competition and the 199t London International String Quartet Competition.

Performances include appearances in New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Paris, London, Lausanne, Panama City, and Reykjavik, as well as frequent performances in and around Miami. The ensemble's interest in new music has led to a commissioning grant from Chamber Music America for a piano quintet from Maurice Gardner, which received its world premiere in January 1993. Previous premieres include Mr. Gardner's Concertino and David Baker's Summer Memories.

The members of the Miami String Quartet are Felicia Moye and Cathy Meng Robinson, violins; Chauncey Patterson, viola; and Keith Robinson, cello.

The program opens with the String Quartet in G Major, Op. 54, No. 1 by Franz Joseph Haydn, followed by Alberto Ginastera's String Quartet No. 2, Op. 26. Ginastera superimposes 20th-century techniques over classical structures while, at the same time, making use of the rich heritage of native Argentine music and dance. Robert Schumann's String Quartet No. 3 in A Major, Op. 41, No. 3 concludes the program.

Tickets are free and are required for admission, with a two-ticket per patron limit. Tickets are available at the Richardson Auditorium box office the week before each concert, and on a first-come, first-served basis the night of the performance. Box office hours are 4 to 7 Monday through Friday, and 4 to 8 the evening of the concert.

For further information, call 258-5000. Concertgoers may picnic on the lawn behind Alexander Hall.

ABOUT TO RELEASE HIS MAGIC POWERS Is baritone William Parcher as Prospero, who consults with soprano Maria Tegzes (Ariel) In the world premiere production of Peter Westergaard's "The Tempest" at the Opera Festival of New Jersey. The final performance is on Saturday at 8 p.m.

Spectacular World Premiere Mounted Of Peter Westergaard's "The Tempest"

Twenty years is a long time. Children ean grow up and leave home in 20 years. Princeton composer Peter Westergaard nurtured his own "child" during the past 20 years — an opera, based on William Shakespeare's The Tempest, to which Prof. Westergaard has been eommitted for much of his life. Opera Festival of New Jersey brought this "child" to life on Friday night as the world premiere of Prof. Westergaard's The Tempest took placc on the stage of the Kirby Arts Center at The Lawreneeville School.

All through the spring, news of The Tempest has been in the air. The difficulty of the music, incredible range of orchestration and instrumentation, and the textual possibilities have been bantered about among music and opera lovers' circles during the past months. Though Prof. Westergaard had emphasized in prc-production interviews that the audience should "come and liave a good time," the Opera Festival audience had been on pins and needles all spring about how this production would take shape and how it would extend the company's capabilities furtlier into the operatic repertory.

What was first apparent about Friday night's performance was overwhelming awe at the incredible amount of work that went into bringing this production to life. The singers, artistic staff, and technical staff of Opera Festival wcre taxed as they never have been before to present the range of imagery, sound, light, and vocal line required for this opera.

The technical staff (including set designer Ron Kadri, costume designer Baker Smith, and lighting designer F. Mitchell Dana) had a chance to "strut their stuff" from the opening shipwreck scene. Against a stage bathed in blue and purple, Mr. Kadri's abstract set served as the ship about to be wrecked in a cacophony of swirling orchestral sounds and singing. The scene was designed to represent chaos, and chaos it indeed was. In a pre-performance lecture, Mitchell Dana described his approach to the lighting as seeking shapes and combinations which represent the supernatural. He was suceessful, both in this scene and throughout the production, and the lighting aspeets of the show were one of the most talked-about elements of the opera during intermissions.

Baritone William Pareher brought regality and a stunning vocal presence to his role as Prospero, the rightful Duke of Milan and the character around whom much of Prof. Westergaard's libretto is focused. His daughter Miranda was brought to life with a mature verve touehed with innocence by soprano Martha Elliott. These two characters provided the "stability" around whieh the "evil" of Antonio and the "buffoonery" of some of the King's henchmen revolved. Prof. Westergaard elaimed only to have used 40 percent of Shakespeare's original text, but he retained much of the humor of the play in the text that he used, helping offset the complexity of the score. Opera Festival also helped out with the use of supertitles, which enabled the audience to grasp some of the more diffieult Shakespearean vocabulary and sentence structure.

The role of Ariel was a portrait in sound technology and capabilities of the human voice. Soprano Maria Tegzes has been creating this role through workshops and scene performances for several years, and has incorporated a fiendishly difficult vocal part, including tone wavering and extreme dynamics into her coloratura voiee. Ariel required dramatic control of voice, body, and facial expression, and Ms. Tegzes maintained eharacter as if this Puek-like spirit were part of her own being. She was "backed up" in her antics by three fiery spirits, all well sung by Ilana Davidson, Shannon Coulter, and Michele Nonnenmaeher. At one point, Mitchell Dana's lighting bathed the four spirits entirely in green, portraying them as a type of strange musieal grasshopper.

Caliban, whose primeval characteristics offer one of the great ehallenges of this plot, was created as an aboriginal, with the help of makeup and wig designer Susan Sittko and the costumes of Mr. Smith. Bass Michael Jones brought this unearthly character to life with a sophisticated style which was in no way stereotypical. No detail was overlooked in constructing Caliban, not even the protruding fingernails on his three-fingered hands.

"The Tempest"

Tenor Frank Kelley portrayed the "protagonist" Ferdinand with a very appealing voice and character, and accurately reflected Ariel's description of Ferdinand as a "strutting chanticleer." Although this character has little action, he provided composer Westergaard with the opportunity to develop lyrical vocal lines and shadings as he developed the musical relationship between Ferdinand and Miranda.

This opera teems with evil baritones, including Antonio, the "usurping Duke of Milan," sung with steeliness by Michael Wilson; and the King of Naples, who may or may not have been in on the plot to overthrow Prospero, performed in regal form by Thomas Sandri. The remaining characters are by no means minor in significance: Gonzalo (performed by Nicholas Netos) and Sebastian (sung by David Kellett) all contribute to the intricate weaving of the plot of Prof. Westergaard's libretto.

Comic relief was provided by the antics of the King's jester Trinculo, sung by David Ronis, and the King's butler Stephano, performed by David DuPont. The character of Trinculo hovered somewhere between the Marx Brothers and Saturday Night Live's "Opera Man," and Mr. DuPont kept the comic action moving along with his portrayal of the hapless Stephano. Caliban also was drawn into their comedic circle, adding to the range of Mr. Jones' performance.

Much of the "big picture" of this opera production was left to stage director Christopher Mattaliano and conductor Michael Pratt, and both of these individuals had their work cut out for them. This was not an operatic score for the faint-hearted, and Prof. Westergaard's masterful orchestration drew upon all the capabilities of the Concert Soloists Chamber Orchestra, especially in the percussion section. Vocal lines were punctuated and augmented by matched cello or alternating clarinet parts from the orchestra, and at no point did the ensemble overbalance the singers in this intricate and formidable orchestration.

Prof. Westergaard had stated previously that this was a score constructed in part of intervalic relationships, and this aspect could be heard when one had the opportunity to tear one's attention away from the stage to listen to the orchestral accompaniment. The word-painting of the score also made full use of the orchestra, and the musical interludes between the action on the stage were suspenseful as the audience waited for the next set of characters to continue the storyline.

One would really have to see this production more than once to appreciate director Mattaliano's work. So much is thrown at the audience at once in terms of music and production technique that the movement of the actors is often missed. The abstract dance sequences with Calihan, Trinculo, and Stephano and the opening shipwreck scene are but two examples of the complexity of action on Mr. Kadri's stark stage. Clever use has been made of props, including banquet platters which then become mirrors of the evil of Antonio and Alonso.

All the roles of this opera were difficult for different reasons. From the musical stamina and intensity required of Prospero to the vocal acrobatics of Ariel, each role is full of theatrical meat and musical possibility. Opera Festival of New Jersey has taken an opera based on theatrical literature and has created a very theatrical production, full of special effects and dramatic nuances.

The company takes such a risk with one production each year — last year's The Lighthouse was but a springboard to this year's ambitious undertaking. In an amazing few months' time, Opera Festival brought this production to life, adding a substantial work to the contemporary operatic repertory and providing its audience with food for thought for much of the rest of the summer.

The Tempest will be presented for the final time on Saturday. The Barber of Seville will conclude its run on Thursday, and Lo Boheme on Friday. For ticket information call 936-1500.

Guitarist Stanley Jordan Performing at Scantieon

The Scanticon will present guitarist Stanley Jordan, appearing in one show only, Saturday at 8. Tickets are $24.50 per person, and a cash bar will be available throughout the show.

Mr. Jordan's discovery and rise to international acclaim is almost as legendary as his revolutionary playing technique. In 1983, the then 23-year-old Palo Alto native had recently graduated from Princeton University and was performing on the streets of New York City, dazzling passers-by with an absolutely incredible two-handed touch and tapping technique. No one had ever before seen a guitarist with the ability to execute a walking bass line, a rhythmic accompaniment, and a soaring lead line at the same time.

Today, music fans have come to associate Mr. Jordan with more than just technical mastery. His albums have ranged from explorations of traditional jazz forms to experimental reworkings of contemporary pop songs, from stripped down solo and trio recordings to elaborate layerings of electronic sound.

Legion Post 218 Suffers Through Another Week

Princeton American Legion Post 218 played five baseball games this week, and lost all of them. The squad's record now stands at 3-18. Of the team's three wins, two were actual on-field victories; the third was a technical forfeit, awarded when league officials discovered that Lawrence Post 414 had used an ineligible player in their 15-5 thrashing of Princeton several weeks ago.

On Monday evening, Post 218 faced Lawrence again. Playing, this time, with only eligible players, Post 414 managed only a 10-6 victory.

Post 218 fell behind early, giving up six unanswered runs in the first two innings, but a mid-game rally brought them close to victory late in the game.

Princeton scored twice in the third inning, three times in the fifth, and once more in the top of the sixth to tie the game at 6-6. Geoff Spies led the Princeton attack, going three-for-four, with one run scored and one RBI.

In the bottom of the sixth, Lawrence broke the tie and put the game out of reach. Post 414 scored four runs to make the score 10-6, where it would remain. Post 218 was scoreless in the top of the seventh inning.

Post 218 outhit their opponents 10-8, but left seven men on base in the course of the contest. Left fielder Brian Mauney was two-for-four, with one run scored and one RBI; second baseman Dave Wiskowski was two-for-three, with one run scored.

On the mound, Jeremy Rathbone delivered a six-inning complete game, allowing ten runs on eight hits. He walked six and struck out four.

Each team committed five fielding errors.

FORSGATE PRO-AM TOURNAMENT WILL BENEFIT CYSTIC FIBROSIS FOUNDATION: The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation received a check for $20,000 from Matrix Development Group, Presenting Sponsor of the CoreStates New Jersey National Bank Pro-Am Tournament. From left, Timothy J. Losch, Senior Vice President of CoreStates New Jersey National Bank; C. Richard Mattingly, Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation; Robert J. Hopeless vs. Hopewell

On Saturday against Hopewell, Princeton pitching was rapped for nine runs on 11 hits. The offense was unable to pick up the slack, delivering no runs on three hits.

Geoff Spies and Rich Bliss split duty on the mound. Spies started the game, and lasted three innings. The left-hander allowed five runs on as many hits; he also walked three and struck out one.

Bliss replaced Spies in the fourth inning. He allowed a total of four runs on six hits, while walking two and striking out none.

Mitchell Davis Post 182 came calling on Friday afternoon, and when the runs were tallied, they went home again with an 8-4 victory.

The game began with a scoreless first inning, but heated up soon afterward. Both teams scored one run in the second inning, but while Mitchell Davis kept going, Princeton fell silent again.

The visitors scored four runs in the third inning, two in the fourth, and one more in the fifth. Post 218 came to bat in the bottom of the fifth facing an 8-1 deficit. They managed a three-run rally to close within four runs, but both teams were scoreless through the final two innings and the game ended with Mitchell Davis on top 8-4.

Mike Procaccini took the loss for Princeton, allowing five runs on six hits through the first three innings of play. Jeff Tantum filled in for one inning, allowing two runs on four hits, and walking four men.

Ted Chiaccio closed things out for Post 218, allowing only one run in three full innings. He gave up two hits, walked two, and struck out two.

Princeton's offense was not as impressive as the score suggests. The team managed only three hits in the game, relying largely on the eight walks issued by Post 182's pitcher.

Moke-Up Gome

Post 218 played a make-up game against Hamilton Post 31 on Thursday, and might as well have prayed for more rain. Hamilton scored three runs in each of the first three innings on their way to a 13-3 victory.

Post 218 raised some hopes in the second inning, scoring three runs to reduce the deficit to 6-3. They were silent thereafter, though, remaining scoreless through the final five innings.

Brian Mauney was two-for-four for Post 218; Scott Muzyk had one hit, one run scored, and one RBI; Mike Nolan and Ron Ira each had one hit and one RBI.

Rich Bliss took the loss for Princeton. Bliss lasted three innings, allowing nine runs on seven hits. He walked five and struck out two.

Jeff Tantum relieved in the fourth, and also lasted three innings. He allowed three runs on six hits, walked none, and struck out three. In one inning of relief, Ted Chiaccio altowed one run on one hit, struck out one and walked two.

Close Loss to Broad St.

Facing Broad Street Park last Wednesday, Post 218 surrendered an early lead to fall 5-4.

Princeton scored twice in the first inning, but Broad Street Park tied the score with two of their own in the third. Another short-lived lead died in the fourth as Princeton went ahead 3-2 only to see the frame end with the score at 3-3.

In the fourth, Princeton posted a zero, and Broad Street took a 5-3 lead with two runs. Princeton scored once in the sixth to close within one run, but the team was held scoreless in the seventh, ending the game.

Mike Procaccini went two-for-four with one run scored and one RBI, as he led his team's offensive push.

On the mound, Spies took the loss, watching as his record slipped to 1-3. He lasted 4⅓ innings, allowing five runs on five hits, while walking three and striking out none.

In 1⅔ innings of relief, Tantum allowed no runs on one hit; he walked one and struck out two.

Princeton was scheduled to play Bordentown on Tuesday. Other opponents this week include Princeton Post 76, Hamilton Post 31, and Hightstown Post 148.

Princeton Team Ousted From Babe Ruth Play

Professional baseball players have to put their vacation plans on hold when their team enters post-season play; youngsters in the Babe Ruth League do not, and that certainly worked against Princeton's team last week.

Playing in the District One Tournament, the Princeton team had several of its better players unavailable because of vacations, and it made fielding a representative team a difficult task. Thus, it was two and through for the locals in a couple of less than impressive outings.

As reported here last week, the opening 10-0 loss to the Hamilton Nationals was a disaster; no runs, no hits, seven errors. That put Princeton into the losers' bracket against Trenton, where it managed a somewhat better showing, but still lost, 9-3.

However, this game wasn't very pretty, either. Trenton's first five runs, two in the first and three more in the third, came without the benefit of a base hit. The winners did get the benefit of just about everything else that makes up a box score: errors, passed balls, wild pitches, a fielder's choice, stolen bases, balks, walks, and a hit batter.

In between the first and third, Princeton briefly tied the score with two of its three runs, scoring on a single by Mike Copley. He drove home Luke Tozzi and Dan Irby.

Princeton got another rally going in the fifth when it loaded the bases with none out, but could manage just one run. Luis Estrada's hit, the only other safety of the day, brought it home but Ben Brenner, trying to score from second base, was out at the plate. The next two batters struck out.

Ahead 8-3 at that point, Trenton tallied once more to wrap up the victory in the seven-inning game.

Trip to Phillies Game For YM Sports Campers

The Sports Camp at the Princeton Family YMCA will attend the Phillies vs. San Francisco Giants game on Wednesday, July 20 at Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia. Youngsters enrolled in the camp during the week of July 18 to 22 will automatically be eligible.

Sports Camp is a weekly camp at the Princeton YMCA that operates Monday through Friday from 9 to 4 for boys and girls 5 to 10 years old. The YMCA maintains an eight-to-one camper-to-staff ratio. The specially trained staff provides instruction in all major sports, including soccer, volleyball, basketball, football, baseball and lacrosse. Campers swim every day at the YMCA pool.

Each week a special event is highlighted. Campers will be treated to another Phillies game on August 4 when the team takes on the Pittsburgh Pirates. Also planned is a trip on August 8 to watch the Philadelphia Eagles football team practice at Westchester University in West Chester, Pa.

Other plans call for trips to the Rutgers University Soccer Training Camp, mini-clinics by area high school coaches, and Princeton University Sports Day.

Sports Camp meets daily on the grounds of the Princeton YMCA, Paul Robeson Place. To register or for further information, call coach Steve Rodriguez, sports director, at 497-9622.

Forsgate Golf Tourney Benefits Cystic Fibrosis

The Cystic Fibrosis Foundation has been selected as the charity to benefit from the CoreStates New Jersey National Bank Invitational Pro-Am Tournament in September. The announcement was made at Forsgate Country Club when C. Richard Mattingly, executive vice president and chief operating officer of the Foundation, accepted a check for $20,000 from Matrix Development Group, the Tournament's Presenting Sponsor.

This is the second consecutive year that the Pro-Am Tournament has selected the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Last year's event, held in October at Forsgate Country Club, raised more than $28,000 for the Foundation. This national organization funds research to find a cure for cystic fibrosis, the most common fatal genetic disease in the United States, and works to improve the quality of life for the 30,000 children and young adults with this disease.

On September 26, Forsgate Country Club will host four of the world's best-known PGA professionals — Hale Irwin, Tom Kite, Lanny Wadkins and Tom Watson. This foursome will be featured in a day-long schedule of events at the Club. A highlight of the event is the Bud Light Skins Game at 3 p.m., featuring the professionals competing for a $10,000 purse.

A limited number of tickets to the Skins Game is available to the public at $25 per ticket. For information call 860-1221.

After a Worrisome Week Ficarro's Regains First

In a topsy-turvy week-and-a-half in the Mercer County Women's Softball League, the Princeton-based Steve Ficarro's Auto Body team lost, then regained, sole possession of first place.

On June 30, Ficarro's lost a heartbreaker to then second-place Logo Sports, 6-5, in a wild 12-inning game. The win gave Logo a share of first place with Ficarro's.

Hitting the ball well for Ficarro's were Ellen Leader (four-for-five) and Doreen "Bip" Romanchuck (three-for-four). Pitcher Carol Ann Mazzella took the loss.

A week ago Tuesday, Ficarro's defeated Miller Lite 4-2, while Logo routed last place Crown Royal, 22-1, to keep the two teams tied for first place with 15-4 records. But last Thursday, while Ficarro's overcame a stubborn Hiohela team 12-9, Logo stumbled against Grove Plumbing and suffered a 2-1 defeat, which put Ficarro's on top of the standings at 16-4, with Logo a game back at 15-5.

Against Miller, Ficarro's got out in front, 2-0, in the top of the first inning, as Cheryl Samsel and captain Donna Nicholson were driven in by Ellen Leader and Darlene Loftus. Miller narrowed the gap to 2-1 in the last of the third, but Ficarro's increased its lead to 4-1 in the top of the fourth, when Carolyn Rodgers and Romanchuck (three-for-three overall) singled and were plated by Loftus and Karen Wagner.

At this point, the Ficarro defense and winning pitcher Mazzella took over, and 13 of the last 16 Miller batters were retired.

In the victory over Hiohela, Ficarro's seemed to be in for an easy time, as it led 7-0 after the top of the third inning. But, in the last of the inning, Hiohela sent 12 batters to the plate and tied the score at 7-7.

Ficarro's went back in front 10-7 in the top of the fourth, as Romanchuck (four-for-four overall) douhled, Linda Gunnell (two-for-four overall) singled, Wagner (two-for-four overall) drove in Romanchuck and Wendy Lockhart reached base on a fielder's choice.

Gina Potts (three-for-four overall) singled, Janet Comerford (three-for-four overall) drove in Wagner with a hit, and Dehbie Smyth plated Lockhart with a sacrifice fly.

Hiohela wasn't finished, however, and came back with two runs in the bottom of the inning, to cut Fiacrro's lead to 10-9. There was no scoring in the fifth and sixth innings, and then Ficarro's decided to end the drama.

In the top of the seventh, Romanchuck singled, and with one out, Wagner drove her in with a triple. Lockhart doubled Wagner home to put Fiacrro's up 12-9. Winning pitcher Mazzella needed only five pitches to retire Hiohela in order in the bottom of the seventh to preserve the win.

"The mark of a good, consistent team is one that can come right back from a tough extra-inning loss and win its next two games," said Ficarro's General Manager Bob Smyth. "Our club is demonstrating not only heart, but also character."

On Tuesday, Ficarro's was scheduled to play Grove Plumbing. On Thursday, they will face Three Seasons at 6:30 p.m. on Mercer County Park's field 4.

Firm Wins Commendation For Historic Restoration

Ford Farewell Mills and Gatsch, Architects, and the Historical Society of Princeton have been honored by a Historical Preservation Commendation from the New Jersey Historic Preservation Office for the restoration of Bainbridge House.

Bainbridge House has served as the home of the Historical Society of Princeton since 1967. It was built as a residence in 1766, but had deteriorated after years of heavy public usage, notably during the several decades in this century when it functioned as the Princeton Library. In 1988, the Historical Society commissioned Ford Farewell Mills and Gatsch to prepare a Preservation Plan.

Following this plan, the architects designed the restoration of the building. The restoration revived the building's historical lustre while incorporating museum-quality environmental and life-protection systems. The structure of the 5000-square-foot building was upgraded, and floors, walls, original fireplace mantels, and wood trim were repaired and preserved. The interior was repainted in its original colors. Lighting and environmental control systems were designed to respond to the office, library, and archival functions as well as to a great variety of museum exhibits.

Michael J. Mills, partner-in-charge of the project, accepted the award, presented at New Jersey's State Historic Preservation Awards Ceremony.

Township Facility

conditioning or any "cosmetic" improvements such as painting, carpeting or ceiling repair

These improvements would be made under the moderate renovation scenario, at a cost of about $1 million, which would also include electrical and lighting improvements and a fire and smoke detection system. Moderate renovation would keep office space in the configurations proposed under minor renovation and would not add any additional office space.

Major renovation calls for filling in a courtyard area to the north of the present meeting room area and relocating departments to improve their relationship with one another. For instance, Engineering, Planning, Zoning and Historic Preservation and Building would all be on the lower level, and Tax, Finance, Administration, Clerk, Mayor, etc. would all be on the upper level. Corner House would be on the lower level as it is now.

The cost of major renovation is $6.2 million, $700,000 more than the cost of a new police facility and $2.2 million more than the cost of new municipal offices in a combined facility.

Police & Court Separate

The new police facility, proposed to be located in the existing parking lot next to the existing police headquarters, would have two wings in which police functions could be separated from court functions. The total square footage is proposed to be 27,500 square feet, up considerably from the 8,000 square feet that the Township police operate out of now.

The deficiencies of the existing building were illustrated In a series of slides shown to Committee and the audience on Monday night. Perhaps the most serious is the fact that the area in which prisoners are booked and fingerprinted, etc. is only a few feet from where a secretary is working, putting her at some risk. Township Administrator James J. Pascale told Committee that the police headquarters is "a disgrace" and "an accident waiting to happen."

Prisoners are also taken up the same narrow, twisting stairway that the public uses to go up to the court room. In the new facility there would be a sally port where a police car could drive up and a prisoner led directly to the booking area. There would also be an elevator to take a prisoner to court.

The slides showed other deficiencies: inadequate toilet facilities and changing facilities, particularly for female police officers, overcrowded evidence storage area, jails (two) for male prisoners only — female prisoners are taken to the Borough jail, a DWI room located in the basement, antiquated heating pipes in a boiler room full of asbestos, computers that are placed too close to radiators because there is no other place to put them, etc.

Volley Road Problems

Slides were also shown of the deficiencies in the Valley Road building, starting with a shot of the ceiling light in the Clerk's Office that came loose one day this spring because of roof leakage and dropped vertically, nearly hitting an employee.

Other slides showed antiquated electrical boxes, plumbing in such poor repair that it .is unusable, cracking in the masonry, windows in need or repair and paint, and waterlogged ceiling tiles. Most dramatic was a shot of the plastic sheeting the Tax Assessor drapes over the computers in her office at the least hint of rain.

The $9.725 million cost of a combined police and municipal facility includes the cost of moving the existing Recreation Department building, a simple prefabricated structure, to another location on the site. It also includes the cost of the demolition of the existing police building, all site work and construction as well as furniture and equipment.

The architects have also designed space for the Recreation Department in the combined new facility. Including it would bring the total cost to $10.09 million.

Mr. Faridy told Committee that $9.275 million was "the high number" and that his staff could work with Committee to tighten up certain areas and thereby reduce the total. But he warned that Committee should look at the functionality of whatever space they were considering changing and "make sure that it works properly."

By way of introduction, he said he and his staff had met with all the departments and had come up with several schemes before selecting the four that were presented. Colored renderings of some of these schemes were displayed briefly. It was clear that the firm had done a great deal of work on this project.

Information Session

Township Administrator James J. Pascale opened the information session by outlining some reasons why Committee must take some action in regard to both the Valley Road building and police headquarters. Both buildings have violations in building, electrical, plumbing and fire protection codes, all of which present health and safety issues.

"We have an asbestos abatement problem," Mr. Pascale said. "We have an air quality problem, especially mold and fungi, and we have some lead in the archaic water supply system." In addition the HVAC (heating, ventilating and air cooling) and electrical systems are obsolete and present potential health and safety hazards.

Mr. Pascale pointed out that a municipality is a "paper-oriented" business for which there are many laws requiring long-term retention of documents. "However, we have totally inadequate archival storage space," he said

Two Deadlines Loom

Two deadlines are looming which make it necessary for Committee to reach a decision soon. One is the January 1995 deadline for completing work to make municipal offices "barrier free" under the federal Americans with Disabilities Act. The other is the December 31, 1994 deadline by which the Township must have a contract to undertake work — rehabilitation or repair — for which it was awarded a $1.7 million low-interest loan by the State of New Jersey.

This loan translates into $600,000 in savings in interest payments to the taxpayer.

John Clawson, the Township's Chief Financial Officer, had prepared a preliminary table to show the tax impact of the four schemes proposed by the Faridy firm. The cost of a new municipal complex (police and administration combined) would cost $15 million in principal and interest over a 20 year period and would result in a tax rate increase of between 8.5 and 10 cents per $100 of assessed valuation.

Major renovation of the Valley Road building coupled with a new police headquarters would cost $17.8 million and result in a 9 to 12 cent increase in taxes. "Obviously," Mr. Pascale concluded, "it would be more fiscally prudent to construct a new municipal complex than to undertake major renovations of the Valley Road building." He pointed out Short & Ford in their 1993 study also concluded that it is less expensive to build a new municipal complex than to undertake major renovations to the Valley Road building.

The Next Step

Mr Pascale said if consensus is reached that one of the options should be initiated the next step would be for Mr Clawson to work with bond counsel to prepare the necessary bond ordinance to provide funding for the project and for the attorney to begin drawing up new professional services agreements with the architect and the construction management firm.

Committee was not prepared to act that night. Mr. Glasberg reiterated his previous position that Committee should discuss with the Borough whether it would be interested in a "sharing" of some aspect of what he referred to as the "specialized" police facilities. The audience, made up of residents concerned about tax impacts and seemingly unwilling to acknowledge the documented building needs and deficiencies, applauded

Mayor Phyllis Marchand reminded him that this issue had been on the table for the eight years she has been on Committee and that during those years there had been plenty of opportunities to look at consolidation of police services with the Borough. These discussions had never born fruit, she said, adding, "If we say we are going to wait, we are only going to delay a decision that must be made."

Mr. Frakt said, "We don't control the Borough. We don't know what they want to do. We'll never get closure. At some point we're going to have to have an answer. Where would you go to get a definite answer?" he asked.

Police Chief Anthony Gaylord took issue with Mr. Glasberg's use of the word "specialized" and told him he did not think that melding the two detective bureaus or using the jail in one facility and transporting prisoners back and forth would work.

Ms. Tuck said the decision was a major one and she wanted plenty of time to study the alternatives. Committee's next regular meeting is on Monday, August 15. Mr. Faridy suggested a work session on Monday, August 8, and everyone agreed this would be a good idea.

GREAT ELM

A Storybook Setting Evokes a Longing for the Traditional

Casting an enchanting spell with its clapboard facade and sturdy slate roof, this traditional colonial reigns on almost one and a half acres of idyllic, parklike grounds... right in the Borough of historic Princeton. As if spun from a fairy tale, the stately yet welcoming front door opens onto a marvelous front-to-back formal entrance hall where high ceilings and a dramatic staircase set a tone of richness and elegance that will abound throughout the almost six thousand square feet of living space, where lavish materials enhance meticulous craftsmanship. Such fine details as wainscoting, custom paintings, custom floors, moldings, and exquisite fireplaces further distinguish room after comfortable room. Tucked away on the second floor, as if deep within a castle, the luxurious master suite offers a spacious bedroom with fireplace, sitting and/or dressing room, and bath. Of course, there are wonderful other bedrooms and baths for children and/or guests. And just a few years ago the third floor was transformed into a timely exercise and children's suite with nearby guest room and bath! Downstairs again, a magnificent 30x26 living room with French doors, a music room, library, formal dining room, and the highlight of the house is the inviting kitchen and family addition which was just recently completed. Every convenience imaginable for the growing family has been included. The large pool, play areas and garages with five-room apartment above lie just beyond, in a setting so tranquil it seems impossible to believe this is a short walk to town or train.

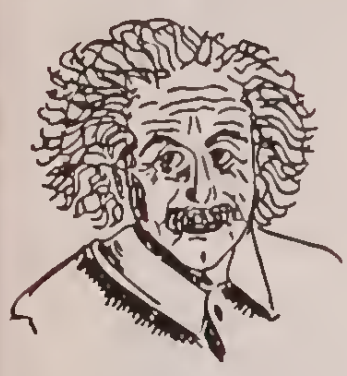
NO MORE 94's

We Will Be Out Of All Our New 1994 Models Soon

ALL GONE



So... you don't have to be an Einstein to figure out if you're waiting for a good deal in September, there won't be any.

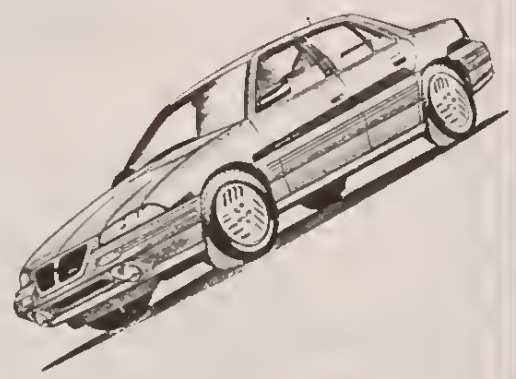
" YOU CAN'T GET A GOOD DEAL IF YOU CAN'T GET A CAR!"

The "Professor" who's in charge of our vans says he still has a few Chrysler Town & Country and Plymouth Voyagers left — the Best Selling Vans in America. He is also our NEON expert and reports he has a tantalizing FLOOR SAMPLE SPECIAL on a 1995 Neon that won't last long.

"Professor" Samuel Farnsworth Garruba IV

Martin "Rooster" Mertz

The "Rooster" is in charge of our Pontiacs and Buicks. He says he still has a selection of Le Sabres and Grand Ams left but this long-time veteran salesman knows they won't be around for long.



What it boils down to is: "Buying a new car is relative: But reduced to layman's terms.....

"IF YOU ARE WAITING FOR A DEAL ON A LEFTOVER IN SEPTEMBER, YOU ARE GOING TO BE LEFT OUT!"
